'AT HOME" DAY FOR DONALDSON

"Gentleman Jim" Gives a Lengthy Explanation of Connection With McWhirters.

ADMITS HE WAS GAMBLING

SAYS HE GAVE UP THE MONEY THAT WAS RETURNED.

Lake's sporting fraternity, will be taken before Judge J. J. Whitaker at 10 o'clock this morning to answer two charges, one of larceny and another of robbery. He will ask for a change of venue and a reduction of bail. Donaldson was the "doctor" in a game of stud poker at the Antler rooming house on September 19, in which Alexander McWhirter lost $2,000 and which lead to an investigation of police methods in this city. Donaldson has been confined in the county jail unable to raise $10,000, the amount of bail fixed by Judge Whitaker at his arraignment. October 19 ment, October 19.

No one has been permitted to visit ponaldson in his cell outside of a few intimate friends and his guards until last evening, when newspaper men talked with him in his cell. "Jim" was a genial host in face of his unusual surroundings. "Come in hoves" he said smilingly with "Come in, boys," he said, smilingly with hand outstretched, "I am mighty glad to see you, as it has been fearfully lonely in see you as it has been fearfully lonely in here. What's doing on the outside? Pollitie's hot? Say, that's what's the matter with me. Polities. Sit down and I'll tell you the truth about this matter. First of all, I admit gambling in that room in the Antlers and I admit winning $2,000 from Alexander McWhirter, but it was straight. McWhirter shuffled and dealt the hand which lost him his money; he has no kick coming. I know nothing—absolutely nothing—about any robbery or $8,000 trick being turned. I was in the room during the whole proceedings which have since been represented as a rush room during the whole proceedings which have since been represented as a rush act, but if there was any money taken from the Scotchmen outside of the $2,000 which I won it was done in whispers, for I heard and saw nothing of it. That's getting ahead of my story, so I will start right in at the beginning and clear every dirty thing that's been said against me."

Tells Story of Game.

Jim was just in the act of lying down in his narrow iron bed when his visitors appeared. He was clad in a night shirt, his face was smooth shaven and did not them before. I would not let O'Brien use any false name in introducing me, al-though the boys called me 'Doc.'

"Larry took a hand and the game went along for some moments when Larry asked if his friend—Alexander McWhirter -could get into the game. No one seemed to object or give his consent particularly. Scotchman took a hand and later

Says Scotchman Shuffled Well.

'The Scotchman's turn to deal came The Scotchman's turn to deal came around and he shuffled the cards well. In the deal I got two sevens up. Mc-Whirter had two jacks in sight. Larry dropped out at the start and left the room a few minutes later.

Scotchman raised in turn. When the deal was completed I studied my hand and that of McWhirter carefully. He had a air of jacks on the table and although had drawn a third seven I was afraid had a third jack. Jack had two queens sight. That's a wicked layout, isn't it? After studying probably five minutes I called the Scotchman's last bet, which brought his part of the pot to $2,000. On the show-down I had three sevens against two pair held by the Scotchman, who had the next best hand, two aces and a pair of jacks.

Says McWhirter Pulled Gun.

'At this juncture Larry O'Brien and two strangers appeared in the room. I was not introduced to them then. What's going on here? one of them asked, glancing at the cards.

They went on to explain that gambling against the law and everybody and into a general discussion. was against the law dropped into a general discussion.

"McWhirter reached into his pocket, presumably for a gun. I told him we were all gentlemen and he could get nothing back that way. He had told the strangers that I had $2,000 belonging to him and now appeared ready to make a gun play. One of the strangers asked him if he had a gun. McWhirter said he had and intimated that Jack O'Brien had Jack held out his arms and told one. Jack held out his arms and told anyone who thought he had a gun to search him. No one did this and McWhirter laid an automatic gun on the table. It was emptied of shells by one of the strangers. Nothing outside of the remarks mentioned was said during this ceremony and we left the building. I stepped into another room and as I was *

HEAVY ENGINE SINKS INTO DIRT

A heavy freight engine plowed into the dirt and came near toppling over on its side, in the Oregon Short Line yards yesterday morning. The monster was switching back and forth in the yards shortly after daylight and in some way ran along a track not in service. On the west side of this track the construction gangs and a steam shovel are leveling the yards. The engine went over the end of the out-of-service track, its front wheels sinking several feet into the loose dirt. As the cab remained upright, the engine and in some way ran along a track not in service. On the west side of this track the construction gangs and a steam shovel are leveling the yards. He agreed and taking the key to the strong box with him, handed me the change for one of the bills. "I then suggested to Parent that he try square the account with the McWhir-ters, who were then at the police station, for $750. He agreed to do this, but took all the change. I followed him to police headquarters and waited in front of the fire station. In a half-hour or so Parent reappeared with the McWhirters.

Parent reappeared with the McWhirters.
They were laughing and talking.
"I followed them along First South and down Main until they reached the Cullen hotel, where the Scotchmen got their grips. The trio then took a cab and I jumped into another and followed them to the Oregon Short Line depot. I sat in the cab and watched them get on the n the cab and watched them get on the train. You see, I was anxious to watch every movement to see that I was not getting double-crossed. When the train had pulled out Parent told me he had to cough up $1,900

Explains Other Matters.

"On the following evening I went in the Vienna and while eating asked the waiter. "Dutch" Rodigkeit, if he noticed the $1,000 bill. He said he had never seen a bill of that figure, and I "Wouldn't it make a nice napkin?" I asked, joshingly.
"Dutch" said on the stand that I said something about the "suckers leaving town" and asserted that "it was like taking candy from a baby," but these are malicious statements. There were no such remarks made. I heard some talk about trouble coming up over the game, but at first was going to stay here and pay my fine. When the O'Briens said pay my fine. When the O'Briens said I would play the gang false, I decided to leave, so started out for Denver. "I met Elfie Fay at Denver and planned going through to Hot Springs, Ark. To prevent any notoriety being directed upon the woman, we posed as Mr. and Mrs. Harry James, while traveling from Denver to Hot Springs. While there we were Mr. and Mrs. James Donaldson. I had no idea what had been started here and Mr. and Mrs. James Donaldson. I had no idea what had been started here and had I known they wanted me here in connection with a robbery would have let them know where I was, and would have even returned to Salt Lake myself. I am anxious to see the O'Brien brothers apprehended, not that I want to see any one go over the road, but I do want these natements corroborated, and they will be when the affair is sifted. I want my bonds lowered, not to enable me to skip the country, but to aid the law in straightening this thing out. I am willing to pay the expenses of a search for the O'Briens and will go after them my#### self if they will let me go, even with an officer with me. Makes Queer Insinuations.

'Now it seems to me that if, as the who was introduced at Parent and had posed as an officer, had taken their mon-ev, he (Sheets) would not have permitted Bell to go after money to settle the affair unless he knew where the stolen money was," was among Donaldson's concluding remarks.

During the conversation he hinted that he had much inside information about the "American" administration and in-sinuated that for this reason there migh: be a scheme on to get him out of the ccurity. Another hint, which did not harmonize with this, was held in Donaldsen's assertion that he might have been working for the administration as a "crime suppressor," and that he was in the poker game in that role and was entrapped. He said he had had not dealings with Sheets for several months, but asserted that Mulvey was one of his best freeze.

"I want to say right here," he went on. "and you can put it over my signature, that Mulvey has asked me several times if there was gambling going on in Salt Lake, and I know he has brought about numerous raids upon gambling houses here."

CHEER DISMISSAL OF CASE

P. L. WILLIAMS MAKES SUCCESS-FUL PLEA FOR THEM.

For the judge is a jolly good fellow, For the judge is a jolly good fellow, For the judge is a jolly good fellow, No one can down. No one can deny, He shaves his whiskers off, He cuts his whiskers off. He bites his whiskers off, And still his whiskers grow.

tune, sixty-eight freshmen and juniors of the University left Judge Diehl's cour room yesterday morning after the court had dismissed the case of the city against James Smith, John Doe and others for mutilating a public sidewalk.

The defendants were students of the The defendants were students of the University who were arrested Wednesday night by Officer Brown for painting advertisements for a football game on the sidewalks. They were defended by Parley L. Williams, who showed the court that no statutory offense had been committed

About 9 o'clock the offenders gathered on the school campus and took 2 car down town. Mr. Williams, who resides near the University, took the same car and heard that the noisy bunch was going to police court. He listened to the story, and became deeply interested in the troubles of the boys, and agreed to defend them.

Yells Announce Arrival.

On arriving at the station they gave some yells to let the judge know they were coming, and then filed into the court room in lock step. singing, "Hail! Hail! the gang's all here!" At first the dignity of the court was shocked, and he bore a severe frown, but the bluff failed and his honor broke into laughter.

The court was so crowded that the The court was so crowded that the drunks and vags were driven from the mourners' bench to the corner of the room in the jury box. One of these, who was an old-timer and thought he was privileged to retain his seat on the bench, rebelled, but the oncoming crush of students soon put him behind the jurors' reiling.

Lawyer Wins His Point.

Mr. Williams then arose amid a tumult of cheers and asked the court to take up the case of the boys as they had to get back to their classes. The judge consented and the lawyer began his speech, explaining to the court that the students had no malicious purpose and that it was only a college prank combined with some Halloween spirit, and further, it was not a statutory offense, so he moved that the case be dismissed.

Students Keep Fun Up.

The juniors and freshmen of the University, not contented with revelry Tuescay night and their appearing in the po-lice court Wednesday morning, continued their high jinks last night. The scene of their operations was the University campus. Having sufficiently directed the public to Cummings Field in the busiess section, additional directions at on the campus.

The feature of this is a big sign twenty feet long and five feet wide, on which is painted "Cummings Field." This is set up on the northwest corner of the athletic field so that it can be plainly seen by people getting off the cars. On the lower right hand corner are the numerals of the two first classes. The sign was manufactured by the boys a vacant yard in the western part of the city, so that the other classes would not find it out, and in the evening it was carried through the principal downtown streets by about fifty of the classmen.

Jacob Moritz yesterday purchased the property at 24-26 Commercial street, at present occupied by the saloon of Fritz Riepen and a small restaurant and tailor "It is true that I have purchased the saloon property now occupied by Fritz Riepen and several feet adjoining on the south side, in all a frontage of fifty-eight feet," said Mr. Moritz. "The property runs back to the alley, a distance of 130 or 135 feet. I bought it solely for investment purposes and there will be no change in the occupancy of the premises for some time to come."

Mr. Moritz declined to state from whom he made the purchase, other than to say that they were New York parties. He was also reticent as to the price, but said he considered the property worth in the neighborhood of $50,000.

It is understood that Riepen's lease does not expire until April rext and that that of the other two tenants has ten months from the present time to run. Mr. Moritz says that upon the expiration of these leases he may decide to make some improvements, but that he will take no action whatever for the present. The property occupies a prominent position on the street, being directly opposite the Commercial street entrance to Commercial avenue. With the building up of Commercial avenue during the past year or so it has grown steadily more valuable.
